instructions for generating a display of a first segment of the body of information from data that is part of the stored data;

When a user visits, e.g., a product page, Yahoo Shopping generates a display of a first segment of the body of information from data that is part of the stored data, as demonstrated by the following exemplary screenshot. Accordingly, it is apparent that the computer readable medium comprises the recited instructions.

The screenshot displays the Yahoo! Shopping website interface. At the top, there is a navigation menu with categories like Home, Clothing, Electronics, Computers, Home & Garden, Back to School, and Deals. A search bar is located in the top right corner. Below the navigation is a banner for Intel Core i5 processors. The main product listing is for an Apple MacBook Pro MC374LL/A Notebook, featuring a Core 2 Duo 2.40 GHz processor and a 13.30-inch screen. The price is listed as $1144.00 - $1199.00. The page includes a product image, a star rating of 4.5 (17 ratings), and a list of featured merchants such as MacConnection, PC Connection Express, and J.R.R. .COM. A product description and specification section are also visible, along with a 'Quick Glance' table listing details like Product Type, Screen Size, Installed Memory, Processor Type, and Operating System. On the right side, there is an advertisement for Xfinity Comcast and a 'Related Products' section showing other Apple products.
