Best Practices to Accomplish Your Ethics & Compliance Training Objectives

Enhance Your Culture & Align Your Organization to Core Objectives

Ethics and compliance stakeholders have two primary objectives when building their training programs. They must train employees on their obligations relative to core topics, often defined by legislation and organizational behavioral expectations, such as anti-sexual harassment and workplace violence, ethics and the code of conduct, conflicts of interest, and bribery and corruption. Well-run programs use training as the vehicle through which organizational cultural objectives are expressed, met and celebrated.

The Best Approach to Optimize Your Training Efforts

An efficient training program maximizes learner seat time through structured programs that allow for full-length and short-form training content to be delivered over time. With an advanced LMS in place, administrators can gain visibility into course and learner management, scheduling, deployments, completions, certifications and attestations.

NAVEXEngage Delivers Unmatched Topic Expertise

Workplace Harassment

Our Workplace Harassment course is updated every two years and is the industry standard for training your workforce on the law and on how to spot, respond to, report and prevent harassment of all types. Our contemporary scenarios also cover the most pressing and challenging issues we face today, such as social media and technology in the workplace, religious and ethnic stereotypes, gender expression, political speech and the persistent challenge of sexual harassment.

Ethics & Code of Conduct

Your code of conduct is the foundation of your organizational policies, the definition of who you are as an organization and what you expect from your employees and stakeholders. Our code of conduct training courses bring your Code of Conduct to life. Our courses are designed to be modular, interactive and modern, with storylines that capture the most pressing compliance and code of conduct concerns of today's organizations.

Anti-Bribery & Corruption

Our Anti-Bribery & Corruption courses provide critical information to employees who may not understand when gifts, entertainment or hospitality cross the line from business to bribe. Learners are tested on appropriate and inappropriate gifts and entertainment, and best practices for interacting with government, foreign officials and third parties.

Cyber Security

Cyber security is a rapidly emerging ethics and compliance topic. No matter your industry, size or geographic location, every organization faces a growing array of complex cyber security risks. While an organization may invest in technology designed to detect and prevent network breaches, organizations must also address the human side of the cyber security equation. Our courses focus on the weakest link in your cyber security efforts, people and their activities.
