

Pain points

- Ifeanyi is worried his ISP is already tracking him.
- Having gone two months without pay, Ifeanyi's finances are becoming increasingly strained.

Pronouns

He/Him

Role

Reporter

Location

Lagos, Nigeria

Languages

Igbo, English

Ifeanyi, the resolute reporter

Recent spikes in censorship in neighboring countries and contention over an upcoming election has only fueled the rumor that Nigeria will experience a similar internet shutdown.

Indeed, ISPs have already blocked access to the popular news outlet Naij for reporting on the Biafra secessionist movement – and Ifeanyi fears his own reporting may be subject to surveillance by his ISP and possible censorship too. Given the lack of trust in the privacy of internet infrastructure in Nigeria among journalists, Ifeanyi has already been introduced to Tor Browser for desktop, Signal and ProtonMail – but now seeks to download Tor Browser for Android to better protect his mobile browsing.

Motivation

Ifeanyi wants to browse without fear of censorship and surveillance by his ISP, particularly during election season.

Risk level

LOW

Trust level

LOW

Technical proficiency

ADVANCED

Income

LOW

Bandwidth

AVERAGE

Tor censorship

Tor unrestricted