Application for Extension of Time To File an Exempt Organization Return

▶ File a separate application for each return.

- If you are filing for an Automatic 3-Month Extension, complete only Part I and check this box  X
- If you are filing for an Additional (Not Automatic) 3-Month Extension, complete only Part II (on page 2 of this form).

Do not complete Part II unless you have already been granted an automatic 3-month extension on a previously filed Form 8868.

Part I Automatic 3-Month Extension of Time. Only submit original (no copies needed).

A corporation required to file Form 990-T and requesting an automatic 6-month extension - check this box and complete

Part I only

All other corporations (including 1120-C filers), partnerships, REMICs, and trusts must use Form 7004 to request an extension of time to file income tax returns.

Electronic Filing (e-file). Generally, you can electronically file Form 8868 if you want a 3-month automatic extension of time to file one of the returns noted below (6 months for a corporation required to file Form 990-T). However, you cannot file Form 8868 electronically if (1) you want the additional (not automatic) 3-month extension or (2) you file Forms 990-BL, 6069, or 8870, group returns, or a composite or consolidated Form 990-T. Instead, you must submit the fully completed and signed page 2 (Part II) of Form 8868. For more details on the electronic filing of this form, visit www.irs.gov/efile and click on e-file for Charities & Nonprofits.

Statement of Program Service Accomplishments

Description of Program Service A

The Mozilla Foundation promotes the development of the Internet as a universal platform available to all and encourages continued innovation on the Internet.

Specifically, the Foundation runs programs designed to make the web more accessible, fuel innovation in the field of computer science and facilitate education about open source and the open Internet. It also supports the broader Mozilla community by managing www.mozilla.org, maintaining the ground-breaking Mozilla community governance structure and making grants to independent community organizations such as MozDev. This community includes thousands of people and organizations who develop their own open source software using Mozilla technologies, including tools for students, researchers and people with disabilities.

In addition to these programs, Mozilla Foundation makes significant contributions to the civic, scientific and educational value of the Internet through the work of its wholly-owned subsidiary, the Mozilla Corporation. Mozilla Corporation facilitates the development of the Firefox web browser and Thunderbird e-mail client. These highly-complex open source software programs are created with contributions from thousands of volunteers and are available for free to anyone anywhere. Firefox and Thunderbird help over 200 million people fully benefit from the Internet. They are of particular value to people whose native language is not English. In 2007, Firefox was available in 45 languages including Basque (~1 million speakers), Icelandic (~320,000 speakers), and Irish Gaelic (~1.6 million speakers). Firefox is often the only way that people in small language groups like these can access the Internet in their native tongue.

Accessibility Activities: Mozilla believes that the internet should be a universal platform that is accessible to anyone from anywhere. During 2007, Mozilla Foundation made $472,161 in grants to organizations developing software and promoting technical standards that make the Internet accessible to people with disabilities. It continues to operate a series of web sites that teach web developers how to create content accessible to people with disabilities.

Science and Innovation Activities: Mozilla actively promotes innovation on the internet and in the field of computer science. In 2007, the Foundation made $82,008 grants to other open source software projects, including initiatives like PERL which provides infrastructure used by hundreds of thousands of programmers and computer scientists. The Foundation continues to house and support Bugzilla, a project that creates software development support tools used by hundreds of organizations including NASA, Argonne National Laboratory, and Carnegie Mellon University. The Foundation also actively participates in Internet standards bodies such as the World Wide Web Consortium, the Internet Engineering Task Force and ECMA International.

Education Activities: Mozilla Foundation supports efforts to educate people about open source and an open internet. During 2007, this included a $100,000 grant to Seneca College to develop an innovative approach teaching open source software development. It also included support for learning events such as the Internet as a Public Good Symposium at Harvard University and the Foundations of Open Media Software workshop. Foundation staff and volunteers spoke about the civic, scientific and educational benefits of the Internet at dozens of events, workshops and symposia during 2007. The Foundation also continues to operate online resources such as developer.mozilla.org for people who want to learn about core Internet development technologies like HTML, AJAX and CSS. These resources include interactive discussion forums and live chat channels that allow learners to ask questions of and learn from experienced Mozilla developers.

Mozilla Foundation
EIN: 20-0097189
2007 Form 990
Facts and Circumstances Test

Mozilla Foundation (“the Foundation”) qualifies as a publicly supported charity described in Section 509(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code under the facts-and-circumstances test of Reg. Sec. 1.170A-9(e)(3).

Substantial Public Support and Sources of Support

The Foundations support from the general public for the prior four taxable years, 2003 through 2006, is 24.29%, well in excess of the 10% public support required by the regulations. This support has been received from numerous individuals and organizations rather than from members of a single family or entity.

Attraction of Public Support

The Foundation has a continuous and bona fide program of solicitation of funds from the general public and carries out activities designed to attract such support. Specifically, the Foundation has been raising funds through donations since 2003. The majority of donors are individuals from across the United States and from around the world who contribute through the Mozilla.org web site (<http://www.mozilla.org/foundation/donate.html>). The Foundation has also solicited major gifts from select individuals in the community and has recently begun researching grant opportunities being offered by the government and other non-profits. There are also plans to put in place a new donor relationship management tool that will allow us to contact past donors so we can ask them to renew their support.

Representative Governing Body

The board of the Foundation consists of experts in Internet and web technology and leaders of the broad community of Internet civic and social activists, including Mitchell Baker (leader of the Mozilla project since shortly after its inception), Brian Behlendorf (co-creator of the Apache web server), Brendan Eich (inventor of the JavaScript language and technical leader of the Mozilla project since its inception), Joi Ito (chairman of Creative Commons and present or past board member of many other Internet-related nonprofit organizations), Mitch Kapor (inventor of Lotus 1-2-3 and co-founder of Electronic Frontier Foundation), and Bob Lisbonne (venture capitalist and past VP of Netscape Communications Corp.).

Availability of Public Services and Public Participation in Programs

The activities of the Foundation in promoting choice and innovation on the Internet are of interest to anyone who uses the Internet and World Wide Web, whether for education, civic purposes, business or personal and family matters. All of the end products of the Foundation's activities, including in particular the popular Firefox web browser, Thunderbird email program, and other Mozilla software products, are provided free of charge to the general public, both in binary executable form and in source code form with permissive "open source" license terms that allow others to create and distribute their own derivative works. The Foundation's programs to develop, distribute, support, and promote these software products are open to any member of the general public who wishes to participate. Tens of thousands of people in the U.S. and around the world take advantage of this opportunity by helping to create Mozilla technology, promoting Firefox and Thunderbird adoption in their schools and workplaces, helping other users with problems, testing new versions and reporting bugs, contributing bug fixes and other improvements to the code, translating the software into other languages, and building their own software based on the Mozilla code or designed to work with it.
