TOP LINE DATA ON THE ADVERTISING AND MEDIA INDUSTRIES

Who are the top ad spenders in the U.S. and on a global basis? What are the hot ads and how much do they cost? Who are the big ad organizations and how do their agency brands stack up against their competition? How big and far-reaching are those media monoliths? It's all in the FactPack, whether in print form on your desk, or a click away on your computer or network.

The FactPack is presented in three sections:

Advertising and Marketing section data were pulled from Advertising Age's 48th annual 100 Leading National Advertisers, and the publication's 200 Megabrand and Global Marketers reports. The LNA report breaks out total ad spending by media for the 100 largest U.S. advertisers and charts the hotly contested industry categories by market share and brand spending.

The Media section's primary source is the 100 Leading Media Companies, an annual ranking of the nation's media companies by net revenue.

The Agency Report section, in its 58th version, ranks nearly 500 U.S. agency brands, the world's top agency brands, the world's top 30 ad organizations, and the top media specialist companies.

NEW THIS YEAR

New to the FactPack this year is a chart showing the major accounts of the top five U.S. advertisers and the agencies covering them; a chart delineating properties of the top 10 U.S. media companies; and a chart that identifies the major networks and agencies connected to the world's top four ad organizations.

FREE DIGITAL EDITION

A free pdf edition of the FactPack can be read using Adobe Acrobat. Go to AdAge.com and use QwikFIND aap360. Where indicated, a more comprehensive ranking is posted on AdAge.com.

Content, sources for marketer rankings

AD SPENDING BY THE WORLD'S TOP MARKETERS, from media tracked by domestic and global monitoring services to estimated non-media totals developed by Ad Age, is the thrust of this Advertising & Marketing section.

U.S. spending for the top U.S. marketers (Page 12) is a composite of media advertising measured in 13 national consumer media by TNS Media Intelligence/CMR, Internet from TNS' Evaliant, Yellow Pages from Yellow Pages Integrated Media Assn., and unmeasured spending (direct mail, promotion, co-op, coupons, catalogs, business and farm journals, and special events, to name a few) estimated by Ad Age.

The 100 Leading National Advertiser's report (June 23, 2003) further breaks out a marketer's dollar totals by advertising medium, and presents the methodology used to estimate unmeasured tallies for public and private companies alike. That same report isolates by media spend and share data the competitive battles in the major marketing categories: Autos (Page 18 in the FactPack), fast food and movies (Page 20), razors (Page 22), bottled water (Page 23) and more.

Data for the top global marketers (Pages 16-17) are gleaned from monitoring services TNS Media Intelligence/CMR in the U.S., and Nielsen Media Research, Ibope and others in 78 markets around the globe.

Ad Age produces two reports a year on super brands by collating media spending from TNS Media Intelligence/CMR into "megabrands," all brands, products and services bearing the same name such as Coke, a composite of Diet Coke, Cherry Coke and Coca-Cola Classic. A top 200 megabrand had to spend $67.5 million in 2002.

IAG'S TOP SPOTS OF 2003

From a regular Ad Age feature (AA, June 23, 2003).

Five of the top 10 ads on Advertising Age/Intermedia Advertising Group's year-end, most-liked list made their debut during the 2003 Super Bowl—including the top-ranking Budweiser "Replay" spot. Meanwhile, several ads outside the Big Game also resonated, including Nike's eye-catching "Streaker."

But on the measure of Recall, Pepsi Twist's "Osbornes" was the only Super Bowl ad to place in the Top 10. Close behind was the final work from KFC to include Jason Alexander. Old Navy and Pier 1 Imports were among the most memorable retailers.

During the fourth quarter of 2003, a holiday-themed ad from Toys "R" Us achieved the highest level of Recall. Victoria's Secret's "What is Sexy?" campaign was also top-of-mind at Nos. 2 & 3.

A spot from Pepsi's "It's the Cola" campaign ranked as the quarter's most-liked, followed by an AT&T Wireless "Reach Out" spot. Sneaker giants Nike and Reebok—both featuring athlete endorsers—were also among the best-received ads during Q4.

Content, sources for media rankings

IN THIS SECTION, IT IS ALL ABOUT MEDIA, broadly defined as media distribution businesses supported by advertising.

The nation's 12 largest media monoliths, from Time Warner to Tribune Co. (Pages 28-29), were identified among the nation's 100 top media companies in Ad Age's 100 Leading Media Companies report (AA, Aug. 18, 2003).

That ranking was based on the flow of net revenue from each company's U.S. media properties which may or may not equate to a company's total corporate revenue. Revenue streams from book publishing, book and record clubs, movie and TV production, media-buying services, electronic retailing, paper mills, wireless services, and trade show divisions are excluded from media totals.

In preparing this annual list, Ad Age draws on public documents in general, BIA Financial Network specifically for radio and TV and Kagan World Media for cable networks. Other informed sources also were used.

Gross revenue from advertising and circulation is the metric used to rank 300 magazines in the Ad Age 300 Magazine report (AA, Sept. 22, 2003). The top 10 are presented on Page 37. Other rankings—magazines and newspapers by circulation and gross ad revenue, web sites by ad revenue, TV networks and Spanish TV by their ad take—are from leading industry monitoring services such as Publishers Information Bureau, TNS Media Intelligence/CMR and Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Content, methodologies for ad agencies

THE 59TH ANNUAL AGENCY REPORT is largely the source for this agency segment. Among its many charts are rankings of the world's top advertising organizations (Page 48); the leading U.S. ad agency core "brands" (Page 50); and the U.S. agency rankings by multicultural specialty (Page 58). Rankings are by revenue.

An ad organization is typically an agency holding company. Figures come from public documents or are supplied voluntarily. The agency brands of the world's top four ad organizations (Pages 46-47) hold nearly 69% of the global agency business.

Agency brands in the U.S. include traditional ad agencies, healthcare and business-to-business shops. "Branding" identifies the core agency by stripping contributions from subsidiaries and specialty units. Rankings of specialty units, Interactive, direct marketing and sales promotion shops (Pages 52-54) come from Ad Age's Integrated Agency Report (May 19, 2003).

The world's top media specialist companies (Pages 56-57), are ranked by media purchases monitored by Recma Institute, Paris (worldwide), and Ad Age (U.S.).
