

In appropriate circumstances, the Trade Adjustment Assistance Program (TAA) represents another funding vehicle to support apprenticeship. All TAA participants are covered under what is called a TAA certification. This certification confirms that the employment of a worker group was impacted or threatened due to trade-related circumstances. Grants are provided to the states to provide services, which trade-affected workers access through the American Job Center Network. States also notify individuals of their eligibility.

To understand "supporting apprenticeship using TAA funding," it may be helpful to first look at the basic components of an apprenticeship program. Specifically, apprenticeship is an "earn and learn" training model that combines work-based learning with related instruction using the highest industry standards.

The figure below shows how TAA funding can support core apprenticeship components:

Work-Based Training

- •TAA funds can be used to reimburse the employer for costs of training, up to 130 weeks
- Reimbursement is based on the wage rate of the participant and can be up to 50% of that wage in some circumstances.
- If the TAA participant is coenrolled with WIOA, local workforce development boards (LWDB) may choose to use WIOA funds to reimburse an additional 25% of the training costs, totaling up to 75% of wages.

Related Training & Instruction (RTI)

- •TAA funds can be used to support the related instruction component of an apprenticeship program.
- Training funds can also cover supplies, books, equipment, and, in some cases, reimbursement of transportation costs.
- If the TAA participant is coenrolled with WIOA, LWDBs may choose to use WIOA funds to provide additional supportive services not covered by TAA funds, such as child care.

NOTE: TAA funds can also be used to provide "Employment and Case Management Services." This includes assessments, career counseling, prevocational training, and the provision of employment statistics and other key information.

Additional Income Support

•RTAA or Reemployment Trade Adjustment Assistance is an employment-based benefit for qualifying workers aged 50+ who are earning less than $50,000 per year in their new employment. RTAA payments may total 50% of the difference between wages in previous vs. new employment, with a maximum of $10,000 paid over two years.

Supporting Apprenticeship through the TAA Program

1. RTAA

- a. TAA-eligible worker is at least 50 years old.
- b. The worker has secured a position as an apprentice in an apprenticeship program.
- c. Annualized earnings less than $50,000 annually.
- d. The benefit:
 - i. As s/he continues to work through the apprenticeship levels, s/he will receive a benefit to help her/him continue the apprenticeship program. The benefit may total 50% of the difference between the old and new wage.
 - ii. These payments can be made for up to 2 years, but must not exceed a total of $10,000 and must be stopped if the participant's annualized wage, which must be computed monthly, reaches $50,000 or more.
- e. Note that this apprentice is still an active TAA participant, and is receiving benefits (RTAA).

2. Pre-apprenticeship training

- a. TAA funds could pay for a "quality" pre-apprenticeship as a training program.
- b. To be enrolled in the training program, the TAA participant would need to meet the 6 criteria for TAA-funded training:
 - 1. No suitable employment is available.
 - 2. The participant would benefit from appropriate training.
 - 3. There is a reasonable expectation of employment following completion of training.
 - 4. Training is reasonably available.
 - 5. The participant is qualified to undertake and complete such training.
 - 6. Training is available at a reasonable cost.
- c. Quality pre-apprenticeship programs are designed to prepare individuals to enter and succeed in a registered apprenticeship program. These pre-apprenticeships possess a number of key attributes, including the requirement to have at least one documented partnership with a registered apprenticeship program sponsor. Once an individual successfully completes a quality pre-apprenticeship program, either they are guaranteed an interview with the registered apprenticeship program sponsor or they experience "direct entry," depending on the partnership agreement.
