Introduction

Check list to make the distinction between household and industrial packaging. (Grey list )

This list was compiled to help you distinguish between household and assimilated packaging, that is subject to reporting to Valorlux and non-household packaging, that is not subject to this reporting.

Definition of packaging considered as household and assimilated packaging:

"packaging waste generated by the normal activity of households as well as assimilated packaging waste, i.e. that are of identical or similar type as household packaging waste although not of domestic origins"<sup>1</sup>

i.e. products to be used:

- in households
- other than in households, as for instance by:
- the catering sector
- services et bureaux
- collective bodies
- craftsmen and retailers
- liberal professions
- markets

are excluded:

- transport pallets, whether they are reusable or not,
- packaging, which was clearly designed, either because of the product it contains or because of its appearance or quantity, for consumers other than those mentioned above
- any reusable packaging.

The check list below, who completes the definition, is not exhaustive. For any questions relating to its application please contact Valorlux.
