In a case dealing with partisanship in the judiciary, Wilson Sonsini represented Delaware's governor on the way to a unanimous Supreme Court ruling preserving a statute that ensures the state's judges are politically balanced. YouTube and Twitter both turned to the firm's litigators to lead winning defenses against claims that they improperly censor content. And in a criminal trial over what the government called "the largest Ponzi scheme since Bernie Madoff," the firm secured a complete dismissal of claims against the former chief investment officer at failed hedge fund Platinum Partners.
